JEREMY STINSON

“Being social is such a big part of most ASPIRE members’ lives—we love being around friends and family that we will use ANY excuse to get together.”

What is a work-related accomplishment you’re really proud of?

Being able to implement Workday Learning was an incredible experience. We had no full-scale global solution for training when I started at C&W, so being able to create something new in that space was very rewarding.

What behavior or personality trait do you most attribute your success to, and why?

You have to be kind to everyone, as you never have any idea what someone else is going through. This is something I have modeled my career around. Just saying a kind word to someone in the elevator might lead to them remembering you on a future project, which could impact the entire success of that project.

What are some personal and professional goals you hope to achieve in the next 3-5 years?

My career at Cushman & Wakefield has led me down many paths that have all been exciting and challenging. I would expect the next 3-5 years to continue in that same fashion. I would love to be able to lead my own team to the successful end of a project, or be able to implement some new technology that makes all our lives easier. As for personal goals, just being the best father I can be to my now 10 month old daughter.
