GLOBAL ECONOMY REOPENING TRACKER

INTRODUCTION

While the COVID-19 health crisis continues to impact markets across the globe, economic reopening is underway. Governments, health organizations and businesses are working together to reopen multiple sectors of the global economy to enable employees and citizens to reenter workplaces and venues.

The Cushman & Wakefield Global Economy Reopening Tracker provides a vantage into the changing landscape of economic and social activity across major markets around the world. The dynamics and details of reopening vary from city-to-city and country-to-country. This is not an exhaustive list.

HOW TO READ THE REOPENING TRACKER

1. On the global and regional maps, the openness of markets and countries across the Americas, Asia Pacific and Europe is illustrated by one of five colors based upon its overall openness percentage. Less open (lower scores) are shades of red, while more open (higher scores) are shades of green.
2. The Summary Table provides a snapshot of overall openness percentage, which corresponds to the global and regional maps. It also outlines the openness of each market and country across ten (10) components of the economy, denoting which are currently open (dark blue), partially open (light blue) or remain closed (dark gray). These components are:
 - Essential Services
 - Borders
 - Manufacturing
 - Schools
 - Construction Sites
 - Retail
 - Personal Services
 - Entertainment / Food & Beverage
 - Office-based Working
 - Public Gatherings
3. Finally, detailed data tables provide yet more information on the governmental, economic and social activity that impacts reopening across these markets and countries.
